

August 8, 2006

To whom it may concern,

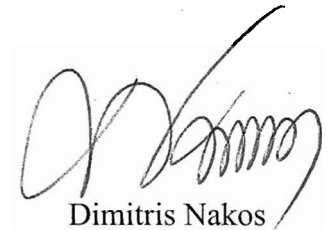

Please let it be known that Jesse Beach interned at Oracle Corporation in the System Management Group in the summer of 2006. He worked on a complex product called Enterprise Manager Grid Control. It is not sufficient to say that Jesse contributed to the overall success of the design for our product. Jesse, in only a few short weeks, became an integral and significant part of our design team. His contributions included leading the design for a complex user interface for patching, developing a testing tool for usability research, conducting formal usability testing, improving our style guide, creating static mockups, and developing HTML prototypes used to validate a variety of design issues.

Our only hope is that no one ever reads this recommendation, and he can find his way to be a permanent addition to our team upon graduation. If for whatever reason, the stars do not align in our favor, we can only hope that his future employer will take good care of him. He will be certain to contribute significantly, with a great attitude, and to be respected by his peers and senior staff. Any organization would be lucky to have Jesse Beach as an employee. If further convincing is needed, feel free to contact Richard using my contact information listed below. He will be missed.

Best wishes from our team,

Richard H. Miller, Ph.D
UI Architecture & Design
System Management Products

650-506-8166
richard.miller@oracle.com

Dimitris Nakos
Vice President
System Management Products